Ms. Chan,

It is obvious to me by now that no one up there knows what they are looking at and are incompetent as usual. The tax payers buy all the new offices and employ thousands of individuals who do not give one dam about what they are doing. So, You are fired from your duties as far as I am concerned and you will now be free to frustrate the hell out of your next employer with suggestions about hiring attorneys and proper format. I will be taking your offices suggestion however about attorneys as I have decided to hire one to question your practices of pedaling patent application information over the internet before due process. Although I have never attempted to speak with you personally, the people I have attempted to speak with seem to have a problem with the English language. Must be this global thing. I guess if the U.S. and its people stop producing ideas and products we can all work in food services, Wal-Mart, or the government. Oh! Won't that be special. All the professionals will be employed by the government at a fixed rate, although I cannot imagine anyone with the salt for the lengthy education would want to do it just for the handle. So, incompetence and poor quality would be even more rampant. But Oh! we could Import them as we Export our industry. Because the government really does not produce anything except paper work to divert issues, It test the mind as to how all this will be funded. When the taxpayers incomes go down and there standard of living goes down, then so does the government employees standard of living go down. Although history tends to be tainted, there are some well founded clues that governments are permitted until it does not work in my opinion. Run along now Ms. Chan and sift through your employers paperwork and if there is anything you do not understand, Well just fill out the rejection form and pass it on to the next government wizard. What I am going to find out is where does it go from there right from the beginning of 8.18.2003.

Kindest Regards,

K. Roger Spalding
